LAW SUITS OVER AUCTIONED COW AND TRESPASS

An interesting case was decided at Napanee Tuesday which involved the question of liability at an auction sale. A sale was held by the Whalen estate of the farm stock and implements of the deceased Wiliam Whalen, and one Felix Cournyea bid upon a cow which was designated as cow No. 7 on the list, and the same was knocked down to him at $75.00. Before completing the sale by payment he secured one Thomas and Andrew Kilty to take his place, and they went to the auctioneer's clerk and had Cournyea's name erased from the books, and Thomas Kilty's name substituted as the purchaser. McGrath was also a bidder at the sale, and when he came to get what he thought was the cow he purchased he found that Kilty had driven away the same and claimed it was cow No. 7.

McGrath brought an action against Kilty for the conversion of cow purchased by him and Kilty appeared and defended the action, and applied to the court and obtained an order adding Felix Cournyea of Hungerford and the Whalen estate as third parties, setting out the fact that if the cow really belonged to McGrath that Cournyea and the Whalen estate were liable to the defendant.

There were some fifteen witnesses examined as to the cow known as No. 7, and the evidence was very conflicting in regard to its identification.

Judge Lavell, who tried the case, found that Kilty had obtained the cow bought by McGrath and adjudged him liable in damages to the extent of $100.00 and costs fixed at $50.00 and disbursements.

He also found that there was no justification whatever in adding the Whalen estate third parties, and that there was complete novation in reference to Cournyea, and that as fraud had not been charged or proved Cournyea was not liable, and consequently dismissed the action as against the Whalen estate and Cournyea with costs. The Whalen estate $60.00 costs and disbursements; Cournyea $40.00 and disbursements.

W. S. Herrington, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff, J. E. Madden, Napanee, for the defendant, Kilty, E. J. Butler for third parties, A. B. Collins, for the Whalen estate.

Another case of local interest was an action brought by Ben. S. Richardson against James Blute. Mr. Richardson owns a field in South Napanee between the Blute farm and the nearest road to the town, and since 1882 down to the present Mr. Blute and his predecessors in title have crossed this field on a foot path to come to Napanee as it cuts off considerable distance from the regular route. Mr. Richardson sued for damages for trespass, Mr. Blute claiming right of use by possession. Decision reserved. F. E. O'Flynn and John English for plaintiff; J. E. Madden for defendant.

VICTORY LOAN

OPEN LETTER TO THE PEOPLE OF LENNOX AND ADDINGTON

Patriotism and Profit are combined in Canada's Victory Loan 1919—Patriotism in financing Canada's war obligations for the clean up after the war; in financing the credits for the Mother Country; for the business the Mother Country will give to Canada in preference to foreign countries and so maintain the market for production all along the line in our natural industrial and agricultural resources; distributing profits among all classes.

There is a notable increase in business and everyone is interested in keeping every line of business humming. Buy Victory Bonds to the limit and you will have done your share in achieving a result which will mean to you individually the gain which will come from the continued general prosperity of the country.

This necessarily will result because the proceeds of this Canada's Victory Loan 1919 will be spent in Canada and an increase of business of the immense volume indicated by a domestic loan reaching possibly a total of $600,000,000 will certainly make business hum.

The money is in the country. All you have to do is to examine the general returns of the banks to be satisfied. These show, August 1st, 1919, an increase in bank deposits of over $200,000,000 over August 1st, 1918, notwithstanding subscriptions to Victory Loan 1918 of $610,000,000. The amount of money on deposit in the banks of Canada on August 1st last showed the immense total of $1,800,000,000. With these facts staring us in the face no one should be fearful of investing in Canada's Victory Loan 1919.

The objectives of the different canvassing districts in the county have been set after careful consideration and are as follows:

Napanee	$225,000
N. Fredericksburgh
N. Adolphustown	65,000
S. Fredericksburgh and S. Adolphustown	75,000
Amherst Island	35,000
Ernestown, including Bath	130,000
Richmond	85,000
Camden, including Newburgh	225,000
Sheffield	50,000
Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham	5,000
Denbigh, Abinger and Ashby	5,000

Which is going to be the first district to gain its objective and win the Prince of Wales' Honor Flag?

The returns to midnight, Oct. 29th, are as follows:

Napanee	$18,950
N. Fredericksburgh and N. Adolphustown	23,950
S. Fredericksburgh and S. Adolphustown	20,150
Amherst Island	1,650
Ernestown, including Bath	11,800
Richmond	9,800
Camden, including Newburgh	27,050
Sheffield	8,350
Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham	not heard from
Denbigh, Abinger and Ashby	not heard from

Every citizen should make it a matter of personal pride to have his subscriptions, from his district, to Canada's Victory Loan 1919 go over the top of the objective set for it. Success means good business and the Victory button for 1919 is an honorable distinction for the wearer. Be sure you wear the investor's button of Canada's Victory Loan 1919.

With the whole country behind it as security for the investment Canada's Victory Loan yielding 5½ per cent. interest for terms of five or fifteen years is an attractive investment. Everyone can take some.

The denominations of the bonds are $50, $100, $500, $1000 and upwards. The campaign opened to a good start, not only in Lennox and Addington, but in the Province—you want to share in the success of the Loan, Don't you? You have only till November 15th to invest, and this is your last opportunity to invest in Canada's Victory Loan yielding 5½ per cent. per annum, interest payable half yearly, and these bonds are quite easily negotiated at any time through any broker or banker.

Help the canvassers by giving your application when first they solicit you. This is proper business and will help the county gain the honorable distinction its historic associations deserve and its wealth can achieve.

Yours for Victory Loan 1919—and prosperity,

U. M. WILSON,
Chairman.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

On Friday evening, October 24th, 1919, about sixty of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Denison gathered at their home to bid them farewell before leaving for their new home in Napanee, during the evening Mr. and Mrs. Denison were presented with a leather rocking chair and an oak writing desk. The following address was read by Mrs. D. Richmond:

To Mr. and Mrs. Amos Denison and family,

It was with great regret that we learned a short time ago that you were leaving our midst. were very much surprised to learn that you were leaving the home and friends where you have resided for so many years. You have made many friends during your residence here as is testified by the large crowd assembled in your home this evening. We have always found you always ready to help us when we needed your help and you have always been with us in sorrow or rejoicing and proved yourselves truly friends and now this we need.

Although you are not going far away still we feel that you are leaving our neighborhood. We sincerely hope you enjoy the new home and find it pleasant and home-like, but we want you not to forget your old friends when you are living among new associates, and we hope to have you among us many times again in the future. As a slight token of our esteem and love we ask you to accept these trivial gifts and hope they will often remind you of your old friends.

Signed on behalf of the community,

MRS. N. RICHMOND,
MRS. J. RICHMOND.

Mr. and Mrs. Denison, although taken completely by surprise, thanked all their friends for their kindness in bestowing these gifts on them. The evening was enjoyably spent in music and games and afterwards refreshments were served. The crowd dispersed shortly after midnight, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Denison much happiness in their new home.

FLAX IN THE DOMINION.

Crops Were Largely Increased During the War.

The war has worked wonders in shifting actually and potentially the industrial balance of the world. Countries that dominated in some of the long established productive activities have lost their pre-eminence. This is the case with flax and the weaving from it of fine linens. North America is in a fair way to come into its own share of this very profitable field of endeavor.

In Canada, thanks to steps taken by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the farmers are being encouraged in every way to go in for the cultivation of flax. The manufacturing end also is being promoted. The Canadians believe they can make themselves entirely independent of foreign flax, and they are equally confident that their projected factories will make it possible for them to weave abundantly and of the very best of linen fabrics.

Four years ago the flax fibre industry in Canada was so small that it was insignificant. The year after the conflict began there was planted in flax only 1,400 acres throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion. Last year the area devoted to this crop amounted to 18,000 acres, and during 1919 the fields have spread to 25,000 acres. According to a report issued a few weeks ago by the Bureaus of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, "there were only nine fibre scutching mills in operation in 1915, and these plants were scattered over a restricted region in south-western Ontario. They were the only ones remaining of a larger number formerly engaged in the industry but which were gradually forced to suspend operations because of the competition of Russian grown fibre and the cheap labor available abroad. Since 1915, however, conditions have improved and new scutching mills have been established. In 1918 there were forty-seven plants in the Dominion. Fibre is being grown in Ontario superior to any quality of the Russian product and equal to the higher continental standards."

Some millions of dollars are now devoted to developing linen weaving mills in Canada, and it is determined to increase these establishments and to make the Dominion a great linen centre.

SELECTING A PREMIER

No Leader Has Yet Been Chosen by U.F.O.

Farmers and Labor Members of the Ontario Legislature Will Undoubtedly Form Government, and the People of the Province Are Waiting Eagerly to See How Slim Majority Can Be Utilized.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—With practically all the former members back at their daily tasks at home, quiet has descended upon the U.F.O. headquarters. Until the members gather again for the conference towards the end of this week that is to settle the question of leadership, there will be no "statement" from the U.F.O. heads, and speculation will have a free field. There is more than speculation, however, in the report that the Special Committee appointed to gather "certain information" in respect to the leadership has already performed its appointed task.

The U.F.O. men who are still in Toronto are as uncommunicative as usual, but the feeling gains strength that Sir Adam Beck will be the ultimate choice of the farmers and labor men—if he is prepared to undertake the task. His name has not, it is true, been prominently before the members, but the delay in choosing a leader points to the probability that the farmers are looking outside their own ranks for Ontario's next Prime Minister. There are a number of very able men in the U.F.O., men quite big enough for Cabinet timber, but those farmers who can be induced to discuss the situation at all, admit that not one of their men has had the Parliamentary training without which a leader would be tremendously handicapped, nor have they an outstanding man whose name alone would command confidence in the province at large. The farmers would apparently prefer a farmer as leader, but they are just as anxious to ensure the success of their Government, and therefore of their platform and principles by getting the best man available. If the choice is not to fall on a farmer then Sir Adam Beck appears to be the only other man who would be acceptable alike to the U.F.O. and to Labor. The Labor men are particularly keen upon Sir Adam, and are not backward in saying so.

The Hydro chairman continues to keep out of the way of newspapermen and no intimation has been given of how he feels upon the matter. His devotion to the Hydro and the practical certainty that he would have to "carry on" with it even if he became Prime Minister, would probably cause him to hesitate about taking fresh burdens upon his shoulders.

The dopesters are already getting busy with the Cabinet slate, and some weird guesses are being made. J. Walter Curry, Liberal member-elect for Southeast Toronto, who has been staying modestly in the background awaiting the call ever since his name was mentioned in connection with the Attorney-Generalship, will likely stay there. R. L. Brackin, the West Kent Liberal, whose friends have visions of him in Hon. I. B. Lucas' shoes, has nearly as good a chance as Mr. Curry, which is said to be none at all. So much for the lawyers in the Liberal ranks. Within the Conservative following there are several able men, including Hammett Hill, K.C., who won West Ottawa from the Liberals. The portfolio of Education is another that the farmers can hardly fill with one of their own men, but whether they will invite Hon. Dr. Cody is a question. They admit his outstanding ability and his service to the province in the short time he has been Minister, but they have not forgotten that during the recent campaign their platform, particularly the recall, received some sharp raps from his eloquent tongue. The Provincial Secretary's Department is another one requiring professional training in its Minister. The bulk of the work there is in connection with the provincial hospitals and the preservation of the public health, a task that was to have been taken over in a large measure by Hon. Dr. Ross had the Hearst Government survived.

Although the Liberals are claiming that Asmussen, the Independent Liberal, who defeated the "regular" Liberal nominee in South Waterloo, and divers other candidates, is a Dewart supporter, he was not present at the conference held last week. The secretary believed that he had received an invitation.

Even with Asmussen lining up with the Liberals it appears that the U.F.O. and Labor members have a majority of the seats in the House. The standing is given as follows:—

U.F.O.	45
Labor	11
Total	56

To this total may safely be added Sergt.-Major MacNamara, who, unless a distinct soldier wing is formed, which is hardly likely, will probably be found with the Labor group, and Nelson Parliament, Liberal member for Prince Edward, who prior to nomination day accepted the U.F.O. platform and was given U.F.O. support, the farmer candidate in the field being withdrawn. This would give the proposed new Government 58 seats and the combined Opposition 53, or a U.F.O.-Labor majority, independent of such additions as the formation of a Cabinet may bring, of four seats, plus the Speaker.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

NEED FOOD AND FUEL

Austria Faces Ruin as Result of Great War.

Income of the Country Is Less Than Half Its Expenditures, and the Government Is Entirely Without Securities or Credit—Allied Nations May Be Called Upon to Save Vienna From Starvation.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Albert Halstead, commissioner in Vienna, who was summoned to Paris by the Peace Conference to elucidate Austria's critical situation, has given out a statement.

"Vienna and all Austria are in desperate straits," said Mr. Halsted.

"The crown, usually worth more than the Swiss franc, is worth less than one cent now, hardly one-twentieth of its normal value. Austria is left with 7,000,000 people, of whom 2,500,000 are in Vienna. Austria's income is, roughly, $3,000,000,000; her outgo, $8,000,000,000. Vienna has food for ten days, but no cash is available to replenish the stock of food, because one must pay $2 for every dollar's worth.

"The receipts of coal are absurdly inadequate, street cars are not running, Vienna is almost in darkness, and there are few trains.

"Unless action is taken Vienna is going to die of starvation and cold, and her debacle will effect the whole of the old Empire. Then what is left of Austria will tie itself to Germany despite the Peace Conference.

"With this desperate outlook, Austria has a new coalition Cabinet, which has the support of four-fifths of the people. The head of the Government, G. Otto Renner, has courageously taken up the burden. In considering Austria we must remember that the old ruling class has deserted the country and that the people, who are now trying to save what is left, were guiltless of the policy which caused the war.

"Something must be done about Austria. It could be carried along by charitable gifts, but that would be simply prolonging the agony. It needs a big, humane plan, participated in by the Entente powers. The difficulty is that Austria has few tangible assets upon which to base the large loan it needs, but it has developed industries and highly technical artisans who can produce quickly if they are fed and have raw materials. What they need is a chance to work.

"The opportunities to buy basic industries cheap are numerous, but individual purchases of factories are not important. The problem must be treated in its entirety.

"The most feasible plan is for the four great powers to permit Austria to issue securities based on public and private property, and to have the four powers underwrite the securities. With a commission controlling such a fund, the securities would offer a sound investment for a ten-year period, and long before that Austria would be a going concern again. If the powers cannot do this, an American or international banking syndicate would find the operation extremely profitable.

"One thing is certain," Mr. Halstead concluded, "Austria cannot by herself pull herself out of the hole. She is going straight to ruin. We can save her and gain by doing so."

Will Visit Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. — With preparations completed for the arrival here of King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold of Belgium, arrangements are being made for the second visit of European royalty—that of the Prince of Wales.

The heir to the British throne, it is learned unofficially, is expected to arrive in Washington about November 10 or 11. The exact date of the prince's visit has not been announced by the State Department, however. Because of President Wilson's illness it has been stated officially that the prince's visit would be curtailed, probably extending over a period of three days, the same length of time that the Belgian rulers will spend in Washington.

Next morning anxious relatives started a search for them, and at noon they were located on the shore, twenty miles above Goderich, in the opposite direction from their intended destination at Bayfield. Bailey was in a state of exhaustion from exposure, but Atkinson seemed none the worse for the night's adventure.

MINERS STAND FIRM.

President Wilson's Next Move Is Now Awaited.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Officials here were without direct word all day Monday as to the attitude of the miners towards President Wilson's announcement that he will not tolerate a strike which will cause national suffering, and that he is prepared to conscript labor to "carry on" in the mines. It was again made plain that the Government will not commit itself on the merits of the coal controversy, but that its efforts for the present will be an insistence, backed by action if necessary, that the rights of the public be placed first. Claims by miners' officials that the men work only part time and don't make a living wage would be properly investigated and remedied if the miners consent to the arbitration proposed by the President, it was said.

Officials of the United Mine Workers of America stood pat on their strike call for next Saturday. J. L. Lewis, acting president of the union, on his arrival at his home in Springfield, Ill., from Washington, stated the situation was unchanged by the appeal of President Wilson to cancel the strike order.

"I thank God we have a country where men may strike," Lewis said. "May the power of the Government never be used to throttle and crush the efforts of the toilers to improve their material welfare and elevate the standard of their citizenship."

A reply to the President's appeal will probably be drafted by the executive board of the union at a meeting to be held in Indianapolis to-morrow. The meeting was called to make final definite arrangements for the walkout.

Lewis placed the blame of the strike on the mine operators. "The coal mine operators have not offered one constructive measure designed to avert this catastrophe," he said.

"Miners have averaged only $75 a month during the last twelve months," Lewis stated in explaining the demands of a 60 per cent. wage increase and shorter day. "The shorter day would extend the working period more evenly over the entire year," he said.

The demand for a sixty per cent. increase is "subject to negotiations," Lewis said. "But the operators will not negotiate," he said.

"Consensus of opinion in banking circles of New York is that there will be no coal strike," the Dow-Jones financial news service said on Monday. "Coal miners' union has refused to listen to the President and the Cabinet and is going contrary to public opinion and acting against the wishes of American workmen employed in the mines. In view of this, conservative manufacturers and bankers are convinced that if a strike is inaugurated it will be short lived and mark the death knell of the mine workers' union. A coal strike would be less successful than the steel strike."

FEDERAL BYE-ELECTIONS.

Three Farmers Are Elected In the Five By-Elections.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28. — In the five Federal by-elections on Monday three Farmer candidates were elected, one Liberal and one Unionist.

In Carleton-Victoria, the seat formerly held by Hon. Frank Carvell, now chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, the Farmer candidate had a majority of about 3,600.

In Glengarry-Stormont the Farmers' nominee led his Unionist opponent by over 1,000. Glengarry-Stormont was formerly held by John McMartin, Liberal.

In Assiniboia, the seat made vacant by the elevation of J. G. Turriff, Unionist-Liberal, to the Senate, the Farmer candidate beat Hon. W. R. Motherwell so badly that the latter lost his deposit.

As had been expected, Ernest Lapointe, Liberal, had a big majority over his Independent Liberal opponent in Quebec East, the seat formerly held by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Dr. S. F. Tolmie, the new Minister of Agriculture, won in Victoria over a Labor candidate by about 2,000.

The by-election in North Ontario was deferred because of the death of the Unionist candidate.

By-election results went about as anticipated, the chief surprise being the size of the U.F.O. majority in Carleton-Victoria, N.B. The net result of the by-election is that, while the Government loses three seats carried by the Unionists in 1917, the regular Opposition has not been strengthened.

Besides North Ontario there are vacancies in Timiskaming (owing to the death of Hon. Frank Cochrane), and in Kamouraska (on account of the resignation of Mr. Lapointe to contest Quebec East). For these two seats the writs have not yet been issued.

President's Veto Is Overridden.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. — President Wilson on Monday vetoed the War-time National Prohibition Enforcement Bill. Two hours after he had sent his veto message to the House that body passed the bill over his disapproval by a vote of 176 to 55, with two members voting "present."

The opposition commanded 21 votes more than the necessary two-thirds to pass a bill over the President's veto.

The dry forces are strong in the Senate and it is predicted that the Senate will concur in the House action by an overwhelming vote. The bill was passed originally by the roll call.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 28. — With 6700 cattle on the market yesterday, there was a good trade for any cattle showing quality and fat, and this class realized good prices, and more good butchers would have sold at steady prices had they been there on sale.

Altogether we had an active market yesterday, and the prospects are favorable for steady prices. There appears, as stated before, to be a marked scarcity of finished butcher cattle. There was a fair clean-up, nowithstanding this.

There was a heavy run of sheep and lambs—7268, according to the board. The lamb market was lower, choice lambs selling at from 13c to 14c (a few only at the latter price). The market was inclined to drag, the bad weather of the last day or two militating against trade. At the close a good many were left over.

Sheep held steady.

There was a big run of hogs—4091, to be exact—and the price ran all the way from 17¼c to 18c per lb., fed and watered. For yesterday's loading the packers are talking 50c more off.

MINUTES OF THE LENNOX & ADDINGTON TEACHERS INSTITUTE

The teachers of Lennox & Addington held their annual meeting in the hall of the N. C. I. Oct. 9th and 10th.

The president, Mr. Trenouth principal Napanee P. S., called the meeting to order and asked the teachers to sing one verse of the National Anthem after which Rev. Dr. Shorey, Trinity Church, Napanee, kindly conducted the opening exercises. Being a teacher in former days he remembered the teacher's needs as was evidenced by the sympathetic prayer which he offered, a prayer for love for the child, for the work of leading and training immortal souls; for a public spirit, leading teacher to aid in the great work of reconstruction now going on, a prayer for union among themselves and with the great teacher, and that the Heavenly Father would at last breathe peace upon this war torn world. The teachers felt honored to have Rev. Dr. Shorey, a former Napanee teacher with them.

The minutes of the last convention were read and accepted.

Communications from "The School" "The Canadian Teacher" "The Federation of Women Teachers of Ontario" and "The League of the Empire," were brought to the notice of the teachers also a letter was read from Mr. Chas. G. Fraser, re a grant of $5.00 to the O. E. A.

Moved by Miss Parks, seconded by Miss Mair, that $5.00 be paid O. E. A.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Corkill, seconded by Miss Mitchell, that regarding "The School" the san.: arrangement be made for the teachers as last year.—Carried.

Moved by Miss Hall, that "The Teacher" "The Teachers' Federation" etc., be filed for future reference.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. MacLean, seconded by Mr. Judge, that the fee to the delegates to the O. E. A. be increased to $15.00.—Carried.

After the reading of the Treasurer's report, auditors were appointed, Messrs. Forbes, N. C. I. and Judge, Odessa. On the following day the books were audited and found correct.

The following committee were then formed,—1st. To consider the resolutions of the O. E. A.—Messrs. Trehouth and Judge. 2nd the nominating committee—Messrs Corkill and Anderson, Misses Hall, Parrott, and Mitchell. 3rd, Library Committee.—Moved by Miss Hall that the committee consist of the same members as for last year, seconded by Miss Paul —Carried.

Miss Mitchell reviewed the Easter programme and gave a short summary of the speeches, including a criticism of the readers. She advised teachers to make use of the story telling hour and to have school choirs. One of the speakers had compared the academies of teachers, who train children for a useful and successful life with that of Charles Chaplman who is paid $100,000.00 a year for making a fool of himself.

Mr. Trenouth followed with a review of the programme in P. S. section. He brought cheering news from Hon. Dr. Cody, enumerating the improvements which that gentleman hopes to see made in our P. S. system before long. With regard to school books, Mr. Trenouth agreed that those who teach the books should prepare it, and that in teaching history, the object was not a maze of facts but a love of history. The discussion was on teachers' salaries. Teachers, especially those of P. S., being the chief character builders, are worthy of an adequate salary, one that would enable them to live without sacrificing common comforts or even necessities of life.

Mr. MacLean tendered his personal thanks for these instructive and interesting reports and hoped the institute would send two delegates this coming year.

Mr. Corkill asked for expression of appreciation to be shown by a hearty clapping of the hands.

The president's address was laid over until the afternoon and forgotten.

1.30 p. m.—A very pleasing introduction to the afternoon session was an instrumental solo by Miss Wartman and a vocal solo by Miss Juanita Thompson, after which Mr. Corkill gave the Inspector's address. No new regulations have been made and the changes in the school law had already been taken up by the delegates to the O. E. A. The only text book to be changed soon is the one in Hygene. Mr. Corkill then gave some of his impressions on the teaching of certain subjects. He had noticed a marked improvement in the teaching throughout his inspectorate, attributable probably to a greater use of the manuals, but he advised the teachers when they found the exam paper too difficult, to throw responsibility for the failure upon the paper instead of promoting pupils who had failed.

Mr. Fleming, of the Normal School, Ottawa, gave a talk on "Initiative and Creative Art in Schools" illustrated by means of lantern slides. The drawings shown were much admired and reflected great credit upon pupils and teacher alike. In the discussion following Mr. MacLean said he found the lecture very pleasing and instructive. He cautioned teachers against being discouraged if others do not become creators, in fact 45 per cent are imitators only, and all learn best by imitation.

Mr. Corkill was pleased to second Mr. MacLean's motion for a vote of thanks to the speaker. The teachers responded with a hearty clapping of the hands.

Mr. Springstead, agricultural office, Napanee, dealt with agriculture in P. S. and advised teachers to co-relate it with nature study. He promised them help next spring.

Mr. J. W. Robinson, as chairman of the thrift committee, addressed the teachers on "Thrift". His object, he explained, was to persuade some and encourage others. He dealt with the importance of Thrift, in the past, in the present, and in the future and showed how teachers may aid greatly by encouraging children to help. He spoke of the high cost of living and the prevailing unrest and said that if wrongs are to be righted all must help. None need be discouraged for "a smallest helps if rightly given, make the impulse stronger." Savers are the most thrifty and Canada must save or be left behind in the race. The speaker showed the importance of economy in the child and remarked that thrift means so much that it cannot be overestimated. It stiffens the will and brightens the intellect. In view of the benefit to the child of such a training Mr. Robinson thought a regular course in P. S. would be advisable and conditions prevailing, presented the best opportunity for teaching the subject. Purchasing war stamps is one way of helping. He appealed to the teachers to aid to the best of their ability.

Mr. Trenouth remarked "Like teachers, like pupils."

Mr. McGuinness, speaking for the Victory Loan, said that a Prince of Wales Honor Flag is to be presented to each school reaching its objective and asked for the hearty support of the teachers.

Miss Mair read a paper on "Recognizing the Value of the Teacher to the Community"—a subject that is too seldom considered by the public, judging from the teacher's usual remuneration.

The evening concert held in the Town Hall was well attended considering other attractions and the weather. Mr. Corkill acted as chairman. The audience enjoyed every number on the programme, which consisted of:—Violin solo by Mrs. C. Wilson; vocal solo by Miss Dwyre; lecture on "Astrology and Superstition" by Prof. J. Matheson, Queen's University, Kingston; piano solo by Miss A. Fitzpatrick, and a vocal solo by Miss Vera Armstrong.

On Friday morning the Reports of the Committees were submitted.

1. The following resolutions of P. S. section of O. E. A. were adopted,—Nos. 1, 2, 3, (a.b.c.), 6, 7, (a.b.c.), 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, (with this rider, that signs be placed near schools warning motorists to drive slowly past schools); 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24.

2. Mr. Corkill gave the report of the Library Committee. Fifty volumes have been purchased and placed in a library in the Inspector's office, where they may be obtained by the teachers during the Inspector's office hours on Saturdays, or the teacher may procure books by mail, in the event of which, the Association will pay the postage one way, if the teacher pays for its return. No catalogue is ready yet. Mr. Corkill asked for a list of books suitable for juveniles, and Mr. McLean suggested that teachers send in lists of books helpful to them, and which they would like to see in the Library.

3. The Nominating Committee gave their report, and the following officers were chosen:—

President—Mr. Gordon Anderson.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. Judge.
Delegates to O. E. A.—Misses Parrott and Mair.
Secty.-Treas.—Miss E. Harrison.
Executive-Committee—The Principals of Napanee, Newburgh, Odessa, Bath and Strathcona.

History as dealt with by Mr. Anderson and Misses Hammell and Kennedy, proved very helpful.

Mr. Anderson thinks the Manual is a great aid and that great use should be made of pictures, maps and visits to historical places. He deemed the story-telling method best all the way through the P. S. There is too much text book taught; our motive should not be amount, but love of history. He considered the Third Book Reader in History too far advanced for Third Book pupils, but an aid in Fourth Book classes.

Miss Hammell, N.C.I., considered History the most important subject on the curriculum. It furnishes guidance at a time when we are much in need of it. Her method showed she believed in her motto, "Know your subject and be enthusiastic". The speaker laid stress on the importance of connecting links, correlation of subjects and current events.

Miss Kennedy gave a very suggestive outline of her method and showed that to be successful in this subject, teachers must know and be interested in history. Their chief aim should be to create in the children a desire to read history, and to do this she would send them often to the Public Library.

Mr. McLean in "Hints on Entrance History", was pleased to tell the teachers that answers given at the Entrance exam. this year were better than usual, but he noticed a great confusion of ideas. He would advise the teachers to try to remedy this, which was possibly caused by a lack of drill; the information had probably not been driven home to the class; or it may have been caused by carelessness in reading questions. He also wished to impress upon the teachers the importance of the story-telling method.

Mr. Andrews wished to emphasize Mr. McLean's remarks. He sympathized with P. S. teachers and hoped history would remain in Group 2.

In his second lecture, "Blackboard Illustration and Decoration", Mr. Fleming said the most important part of school furnishings is the blackboard. Slate is good, ground glass is better; but a good blackboard is a necessity. The mediums are white chalk and charcoal, and colored crayons. He outlined two methods,—1st, the outline or common method, and 2nd, the mass method. He illustrated his talk with stencils and blackboard drawings, and showed how to draw pictures to illustrate lessons in History, Geography and Literature. The teachers were charmed with the drawings, and with the apparent ease with which he secured desired effects, particularly in "The Ocean".

The President, Mr. Trenouth, gave the teachers the address of the Arts Design Co., 80 O'Connor St., Ottawa, Ont., from whom may be secured Catalogues of Stencilling on Blackboards.

In the afternoon the new President, Mr. Anderson, was called to the chair.

The teachers were delighted with the instrumental solo by Miss Marguerite Kouber, and the choruses by Miss Paul's little tots.

In his talk on "Arithmetic", Mr. Judge laid stress on accuracy rather than speed, and the advisability of children's verifying results. He offered suggestions as to different methods of working problems, and asked for discussion, which was led by Mr. McLean, Miss Parke and Mr. Corkill.

Miss Darling reviewed the course at the Summer School, and told of her personal experience as the College in Whitby is such a way as to create a desire on the part of her audience to attend also.

Miss Rockwell, in an excellent paper on Reading, proved that it is the most important subject on the curriculum, yet receives the least teaching. She dealt with her subject under the following heads,—

1. Necessity for teaching reading well.
2. Different things expected from each grade.
3. How to obtain these.

Miss Rockwell concluded by giving admirable examples of expressive reading.

Moved by Miss Rockwell, seconded by Miss Paul, and carried, that this Association adopt a French child for one year. Misses Rockwell and Paul were appointed to draft a circular letter, to teachers, and Mr. Corkill was appointed Secretary of the fund.

Moved by Mr. Corkill that the Secretary be empowered to pay all the expenses of this meeting. Carried.

A vote of thanks was tendered the School Board for the use of the Hall, N.C.I.; also to the ladies who provided entertainment during this Convention, and to the gentlemen who assisted in the programme.

One hundred and nine teachers registered attendance.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Middle Aged Women

Are Here Told the Best Remedy for Their Troubles.

Freemont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change. I was badly nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GOSNER, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Apply few drops then lift sore, touchy corns off with fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

LIVE WIRE IN CHURCH.

Such Is Description of New Canon of Westminster.

Whatever the faults and defects of the Church of England it has produced some very fine parsons. It has the most learned clergy of any church in Christendom. And one of its characteristic products is a type of churchman who is both priest and man of the world, a scholar and yet in touch with the realities of life.

Of such type is William Temple, the new Canon of Westminster. The younger son of Archbishop Temple, he has crowded into his life, before he is forty, a vast number of experiences. He has already won a name as author, editor, schoolmaster, popular preacher, hon. chaplain to the King, social reformer and church reformer. It is told of him that as a small boy his affections were divided between abstruse problems and the novels of Dickens.

Ever since his Oxford days when he was president of the Union, Mr. Temple was marked out for distinction. He is not a scholar of the dry-as-dust type. He is not a prig nor pedant, but an intensely "live" force with immense energy.

He is a remarkably attractive public speaker and can say the most revolutionary things in a engaging manner. He combines the essence of the Oxford spirit with a cosmopolitan breath of view. He is impatient of trifles and has a wonderfully clear method of brushing aside the things that do not matter and getting down to basic principles.

He is out to remedy abuses in the church. He claims that the church should have power to legislate on all matters relating to ecclesiastical endowments, property, patronage and tribunals; that the church should be able to manage its own affairs through representative and responsible assemblies, and that fuller advantage should be taken of the services of laymen and lay women.

"After all," he says, "the church was not formed to be a devotional club providing various forms of worship for those who like that kind of thing. It was founded to be the army of the Kingdom of God, standing for the principles of Christ and in the power of Christ, before the world, or, if necessary, against the world, it is for the two parallel purposes of church reform and corporal witness that the life and liberty movement in particular supports the demand for church self-government. The Enabling Bill does not by itself secure either, but it makes both possible."

Not at Athens.

There will be no exhibit by Canadian manufacturers at the Athens Fair this year. It has been decided the notice was too short for anything but a Canadian Government exhibit, but arrangements are being made between the Government and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for future exhibits to be made at short notice in connection with the Dominion's bid for European trade.

SHAM "HONORS" IN BRITAIN.

Many Manufactured to Fleece Soldiers and Ex-soldiers.

If you meet a man whose breast is covered with ribbons, you need not jump to the conclusion that it was really he who won the war, says Tit-Bits. He may be a victim of the gentry who vend more or less spurious "honors."

An early sham of this kind was the silver stripe, which, though often worn, was never authorized.

Similar is the "French wounded ribbon" (blue, orange and white), worn by some men who were wounded in France or Belgium. The British authorities do not recognize it.

Where, again, is there any regulation under which the so-called "Italian ribbon" may be sported by men who took part in the operations in Italy? Actually the ribbon of the Independence Medal, it is authorized by the Government of that country, but British soldiers are not allowed to wear it.

In the same way, the ribbon of the Serbian Medal, though perfectly legitimate in the country of its origin, is ridiculous when worn by Britons.

Perhaps the greatest sham of all is the "Allies' Ribbon," which is a much-colored product of the real comic opera order. For it is a fictitious "honor" created by unscrupulous traders for the purpose of fleecing soldiers and ex-soldiers, who buy it (often at a grossly extortionate price) on the honest belief that they are entitled to wear it.

In addition to a fine show of "decoration" of this kind, some men have a brilliant display of ribbons, etc., which, though equally objectionable from the military point of view, are merely "unauthorized."

When, for instance, it was announced that a silver rosette would be issued as an addition to the 1914-Star, manufacturers rushed out that article immediately.

So, too, in the case of the General Service Medal. Months ago, long before a simple regulation concerning it was issued, the appropriate ribbon — or what purported to be such—was on sale, and was largely bought by men who considered they were entitled to wear it.

If dealers who flood the market with such wares are not careful they will soon find themselves in hot water. The authorities now have power to prosecute them.

The Coal Question!

Notice to our Customers

The price of coal will advance at the mines at least 50c. per ton at the rate of 10c. per month beginning May 1st next.

Both the United States and Canadian railways, notwithstanding the advanced freight of last year, have not been able to meet running expenses for months past.

The probabilities are that freight rates will be advanced in the near future still higher. Therefore there is no cheap coal in sight.

We urge our customers to lay in their next winter's supply at once before we have to advance prices.

The Musical and Literary Club.

The Musical and Literary Club will open the season of 1919-20 with a concert in the Armouries, Friday evening, Nov. 7th, at 8.15 p.m. The Club has been fortunate in securing the services of Miss Charlotte Bergh, coloratura soprano, of Chicago, who is assisted by Edna Wheeler Ballard, harpiste, and Mr. Tracy Kingman, baritone. Miss Bergh is a young artist who is rapidly coming to the fore in the United States. She has sung with the Metropolitan Opera and has been called the second Galli-Curci. Miss Bergh is making a very short tour in Canada, after which she goes to fill an engagement of ten weeks at $400.00 a night. The company had the honor of performing before the Prince of Wales in Kingston, after which they fill engagements in Ottawa and Montreal. The Napanee citizens who had the pleasure of hearing them in Belleville and Kingston, were more than delighted and feel that anyone missing the concert on Nov. 7th will surely regret it. The admission fee will be 50c. There will be a public meeting of the Club in the Board Room of the Public Library, Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock for the purpose of electing a 1st Vice-President.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA FILM

Noble Women of England shown in "The Great Love."

It is not often that a motion picture producer can call to his aid the services of a Queen and women of the most exclusive nobility of England. But David Wark Griffith, producer of the famous "Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," and "Hearts of the World" has succeeded in accomplishing this in "The Great Love," his photoplay which will be shown at the WONDERLAND Theatre, one night and special matinee, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11th. In this photoplay, Queen Alexandra and many titled ladies are seen engaged at their various duties in hospitals and on their estates—some scrubbing, some mopping floors, others engaged in attending convalescent soldiers, while others do menial work, but which they do not deem degrading, because it is necessary for them to do their bit in order that the cause of world democracy may triumph. This is a remarkable photoplay and Manager Tustin is preparing to handle record-breaking crowds at the production of "The Great Love" at his play house, with special orchestra and effects. COL. A. P. DEROCHE

Director General of Engineer Services in Canada, has resigned his commission in the Royal Canadian Engineers to take up the position of general manager of the firm of Bate, McMahon Co. Col. Deroche is an old Napanee boy, the younger son of the late H. M. Deroche, K.C. He attended the Napanee Collegiate Institute and graduated from the Royal Military College in 1903, later taking a position in the Militia Department, Ottawa. In 1912 Col. Deroche was appointed Assistant Director of Works and Buildings, which position he held at the outbreak of the war. Col. Deroche was one of the first officers of the permanent force to enlist for overseas duty, but was held in Canada for special service. He was the engineer in charge of the construction of Valcartier Camp, and Camp Engineer during the training of the first contingent. Later he had charge of all construction work carried out by the Department of Militia and Defence, including Camp Hughes, Manitoba, Camp Sarcee, Alberta; and Camp Borden in Ontario.

Among the names of a few officers mentioned by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes in the House on May 23rd, was that of Col. Deroche, when Sir Sam said, "a great many officers remained in Ottawa very much against their own will, but they rendered just as good service in Ottawa as any man who stood in the trenchies at the front. I could name a score of officers who begged and pleaded to go to the front, but who could not be spared and were not allowed to go. They did necessary, faithful and efficient work here, and they are entitled to just as much consideration as the boys who went and did their duty so fearlessly in the trenches." The War Office Communique contains the name of Col. Deroche as being brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War for valuable services rendered in the field.

Col. Deroche was appointed Director of Works and Buildings in 1915 and later, in 1917, was promoted to be Director General of Engineer Services. Upon retiring from office Col. Deroche was presented with an address and a handsome present from the staff of the Engineers Branch of the Militia Department.

KEEP LENNOX AND ADDINGTON HUMMING

Canada is running a great National Store.

Great Britain and other lands come here to buy our surplus agricultural and industrial products. These are the orders that are keeping Canadians busy and prosperous. That is where the money comes from that is paying our farmers for their surplus products and providing full pay envelopes for our workers.

But Great Britain and our allies are temporarily short of "cash." So Canada must extend them "credit"—just as any storekeeper extends credit to any customer whose financial standing is good.

The success of the Victory Loans 1917 and 1918 made possible the giving of these credits.

A continuation of these credits and the maintenance of our valuable overseas markets—depend upon the success of the Victory Loan 1919.

You will therefore plainly see how closely bound up with the Victory Loan 1919 is the prosperity of every one in Canada, without exception.

Do not think your individual co-operation "does not matter." It does matter.

Unless Canadians to the last man support the Victory Loan, it will not be the success that our continuous prosperity demands.

Let Lennox and Addington do its share to keep things humming.

AN EXCHANGE OF MONEY THAT PAYS.

A dollar bill is Canada's promise to pay.

So are Victory Bonds.

But Victory Bonds pay interest.

Consider the security behind Victory Bonds—Canada and all that is contained therein.

Consider the good rate of interest—Victory Bonds pay 5½ per cent.—nearly twice as much as Savings Banks.

Consider the saleability of Victory Bonds.—Their use as collateral for a loan.—Their prospective advancement in price.

Consider the purpose for which Canada needs the money: cleaning up our obligations to the army and maintaining the prosperity of the country.

Are not these reasons the best in the world for exchanging one kind of money for another?

Should not every Canadian put his weight behind this loan?

Should not he exchange all the money he has for Victory Bonds?—and all the money he can save for the next ten months to come?

Buy Victory Bonds—Because Canada must raise the money to carry out her obligations to her army.

Victory Loan 1919 Is Bridge Between War and Peace.

Agricultural and Industrial Prosperity of Canada Depends on Success of the Loan.

Why is it necessary to have another Victory Loan? Have you heard this query? Or have you asked it?

The Victory Loan of this year stands out as the bridge between war and peace. The war is over. Our boys won that. The reconstruction period is dawning and we at home must win that.

Much of the money that Canada is asking for will be needed to clean up the war debt. The expenses of demobilization were heavy, and there is still much of it unpaid. Now that our men are back, let it not be said that we repudiated the debt for bringing them back.

The sick and wounded soldiers still in hospitals are expecting that Canada will care for them and their dependents until they have been returned to health and strength. The hospital services must be maintained at full strength as long as there are returned men needing attention.

Many men through disability are unable to return to their pre-war occupations. The Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment is doing a fine work in training returned soldiers in trades and professions that they can earn a living at, and is following up the training and seeing that they obtain remunerative employment. The maintaining of this branch of reconstructive service calls for much funds, and the Victory Loan will be used to pay for it as well as the other purposes.

Under the Soldiers' Land Settlement Act, enough money is lent to returned soldiers to enable them to buy and stock a farm. This money will be repaid at a low rate of interest. The soldier is thus given a chance to re-instate himself in civil life, and production is given a boost. Of the total amount of the forthcoming loan, $34,000,000 has been apportioned to finance these soldier-farmers.

Pensions to the disabled and dependents of our glorious dead, as well as the authorized gratuities will be other items on the expense sheet. These are some of the obligations owing to the returned soldier who is now in health.

The maintaining of Canada's prosperity is an important reason why the Victory Loan should be a smashing success. The money is needed to finance the credits to overseas countries so that they may continue their trade relations with us. If Canada cannot give these credits other countries will, and then Canada will lose all that great overseas trade that has been the mainstay of our agricultural and industrial life for so long.

As an investment Victory Bonds are eminent. During 5½ per cent. selling above par on the open market, and guaranteed by the Dominion—what further reason can you have for hesitating? The Victory Loan 1919 ought to be oversubscribed, and all right-thinking citizens will do their utmost to see that such a result is obtained.

TO CARE FOR WOUNDED

Money From Victory Loan Will Be Used to Re-establish Soldiers.

Our soldiers in France faced perils other than those of shell and gas and machine-gun fire. There was the peril of tuberculosis. Up to August last 1,909 soldiers suffering from this disease had been returned to Canada. These were placed in sanitoriums under the direction of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, and they are one of the departments of that branch that must be maintained, and come under the head of capital war outlay.

All of these men and some 20,000 others, disabled or ill, will be looked after with money raised through the Victory Loan 1919. It is the sacred duty of Canadians that the money is forthcoming.

Success of Victory Loan 1919 Will Insure Steady Markets for Farmers.

It takes some six bushels of wheat to feed the average person in Canada annually. Roughly, therefore, the eight million people here consume about 50,000,000 bushels each year. But even in a poor year the crop is some five times that amount, and the surplus must be sold if the farmers are to get a return for their time and labor. But the sale of the crop must be financed. Great Britain, which provides our greatest market, has not the ready cash; and so Canada must find means of raising the money. Hence the Victory Loan 1919. In view of the fact that the prosperity of the Dominion is dependent to a considerable extent upon the sale of her surplus grain the necessity of the money being forthcoming is patent.

THINK TANLAC THE FINEST ON EARTH

Husband and Wife are Both Praising It For Good it Has Done Them

"I am still praising Tanlac," writes Daniel J. Hickey, of 217 Euclid Ave., Toronto, Ontario, in a recent communication received from him at the Tanlac office.

Mr. Hickey has lived in Toronto all his life, being employed at the Dominion Steel Works, and his statement in which he tells how Tanlac relieved him of a long standing case of stomach trouble and rheumatism attracted wide spread attention when it was first published. In corroboration of her husband's statement, Mrs. Hickey also relates her own wonderful experience with this medicine as follows:

"I had nervous trouble for six years," said Mrs. Hickey, "and was in such a terrible condition that I had to stay in bed four or five months every year. My energy was completely gone and when I was up I was too weak even to sweep the floor, and I had no appetite and what little I forced down did me hardly any good. My skin was pale and sallow and I could hardly sleep at night.

"My husband was taking Tanlac and he improved so fast that I decided to try it too, and since taking a few bottles I am now in better condition than I have been in several years. My nervousness is all gone, my appetite is fine and I sleep like a child at night. From the way Tanlac has fixed me up, both my husband and I think it is about the finest medicine there is."

Tanlac is sold in Napane at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON. (advt)

CANADA NEEDS MONEY

War Expenditures Still to Be Met From Proceeds of Victory Loan.

The war is over and won; but Canada's main expenditures for war will not be complete until well on into 1920. The $610,000,000 raised last year has all been spent, $400,000,000 having been largely devoted to soldiers—to maintaining them, bringing them home, providing the necessary medical services, training them. Most of the balance of the loan was lent to Great Britain to enable her to buy our surplus products. And money is still necessary — for soldiers, for providing markets, for our surplus products, for the needs of reconstruction. And that is why another Victory Loan is necessary. Canada still needs money, and needs it badly.

A Good Investment.

Speculation is one thing. Investment is another. The majority of citizens want an investment, not a speculation. And they want a safe investment. Victory Bonds fill that requirement as does no other investment. Because behind every bond there is the national wealth of Canada—a wealth so great that it staggers the imagination.

FARMERS' ASSOCIATIONS

AND SOME INFORMATION FOR MR. R. H. PAUL.

To the Editor of The Express:—

Dear Sir: Your last week's issue contains a letter from Mr. R. H. Paul in which he refers to me and the Farmers' Associations. If Mr. Paul will take the trouble to call at the Agricultural Office, Napanee, he will find that there are five Farmers' Associations in the county, namely, Richmond, Robblndale, South Fredericksburgh, Wilton and Odessa, which are called the Farmers' Co-operative Associations, Limited. These were organized less than two years ago by the agricultural representative with charters and by-laws granted by the Provincial Government. By refering to the by-laws Mr. Paul will find that

OBJECTS

"The objects of the association shall be to carry on the general business of producing, buying, selling, dealing in, manufacturing and marketing all products of the farm and to manufacture, buy, sell, own and control, and deal in, farm machinery and all other farm supplies, and to buy, sell own and control real estate, buildings, machinery and other materials as needed in its business, and to do all things necessary to the accomplishment of these objects."

These associations are separate from the United Farmers, or any of their branches, of which there is no record of any in the County of Lennox.

Mr. Paul has probably forgotten that at the meeting of which he made mention it was positively stated by the chairman and speakers that no clubs or associations in the county had anything to do by the bringing out of a candidate at that meeting.

No good purpose can be served by unkindly making threats as to what shall or shall not be tolerated by any one who chooses to vote for the candidate of their choice.

As to being desirous of a nomination I can assure the gentleman that somebody has been "kidding him." I had no idea of such a thing, neither would I accept the nomination of a third party candidate under any conditions or circumstances whatever.

I trust Mr. Editor I have made matters quite plain and with a much kindlier spirit than exhibited by our other correspondent. I will not further trespass upon your paper by going into print again to answer personal letters.

Thanking you for inserting the above, I am,

Yours respectfully,
A. L. DAVIS.

FINDS MOOSE LIKABLE

HUNTER TELLS SOME OF HIS EXPERIENCES.

William Rindsfors Says That Animal No Longer Seems to Him an Object for Bullet of Sportsman, But He Regards the Moose as a Sort of Overgrown Freak of a Fellow to Watch With Interest and Amusement.

I HAVE seen and hunted moose under many circumstances and conditions; often have I watched them when undisturbed and unafraid, when they felt the presence and fear of neither man nor beast; I have followed and observed them in the summer's lakes and muskegs and in the winter's snows; I have seen the bull with the hairy stubs of spring and the gallant antlers of fall, and I have seen the ungainly mother and her funny calf, writes William Rindsfors in Hunter-Travelers-Trapper. In fact I have known the noble but incongruous, the powerful but awkward moose so long and under such varying circumstances that to me he is no longer an animal to seek and kill for sport, but a sort of bullish, overgrown, over-muscled freak of a fellow to watch with interest and amusement. When I first see him each season I have an instinctive desire to first admire his ungainly, foolish, green strength and then walk up to him like an old country friend, slap him on the back and say, "How are you, old fellow? I sure am glad to get back in the country again."

To me the moose is different from any other animal. Different in appearance. Note the long but useful upper lip; the long, awkward, but reliable ears; the humped-up forequarters, that make me sometimes think of our "comic artist" portrayals of a combination elephant and donkey. Compare his actions. What other animal can trot like a "Maude S" through down timber, brule and Jack pine and yet with a noiseless speed; can swim for hours in the lakes, dive to their bottom for food and walk through quicksand with a natural desire; is equally at home on high land and low land, on snow, ice and water, in open glade and thickest brule; could live and thrive on frozen willows, that burn one's hand like a hot iron? is so strong and yet so awkward. He is an ass in a lion's skin with lion's courage and the brains of an ass. Compare his movements with the grace of the deer, sheep, cougar or coyote, his awkward, bullish, blind-fury defence against the cold-blooded, skillful calculating attack of the wolf. Surely the moose is different. The "last" of a vanished type of the distant misty past. A hold-over of the carboniferous age, a huge one of the herbiverous age. But I like him at any rate and I never gloat over his body since I killed the first one long ago. Now I kill him for a useful purpose or not at all.

Some of my first hunting experiences were with moose. How well I remember one frosty morning in New Brunswick. Hubald Martin was the guide's name, who hauled me on a springless wagon, many miles above the St. John river, over "stumpy lanes," but mostly up creek-beds we drove, until, after several days, we came to the "Portage" and sent our driver back, while we pitched our tent and ate our potatoes and butter in great content.

Day after day we waded down stream, never lifting our feet above water, to avoid the splash of a "break water" step. At last "the" morning came. How fast my heart beat as we cautiously waded around each river bend and peered down the next stretch. How fervently I prayed the good God to bless us. We are rounding the bend. How the primeval instinct came back. There on a low gravelly-bare island, unconscious of us, stood the largest animal to me in the whole world — a veritable mammoth. The Lord was with me and I feared not. I could feel Hubald tremble. The shots rang out on the frosty air. He turned; few faltering steps; a dead moose; crimson waters; I, the happiest hunter of hunters.

With true Latin emotions Hubald grasped my hand, threw up his hat and shouted: "Ain't you glad! Ain't you glad!" He could not understand my apparent indifference. True, I felt proud and happy. A dream had come true. But, when I look even now on that noble head, I feel that same sad desire to put him back in his "bogen."

The days passed, I had willed "my moose," but I could not leave that heavenly country of fish and game. With back packs we went to a long-abandoned camp to stay two days. There were many ponds and much "sign." Slowly we walked up an old tote road. Down we crouched as two moose came round a bend, cow and calf. The wind in our faces we held our breath behind a screen of moose weeds. Slowly the two moose came down the road nibbling; unafraid. The calf wandered off the road, the mother, with proper solicitude, now and then calling it back. But all is not well. Full well that cow knows it. Instinctively she feels something is ahead. She stops and silently looks around. Perhaps she hears my heart beat, or smells my dead pipe. A warning authoritative snort; the calf comes back at once; while the cow drives it ahead, as they slowly but surely leave that country.

Another fall has come, and again I am in the New Brunswick woods; this time by canoe to a chain of lakes that head the Green river and Rimouski. We cross a little divide with back packs. Many moose are seen, but not the big bull. He must be near; there are so many cows and calves. Pierre knows it. "We go ride; boil tea; maybe dusk; bull come to cow. We stop for tea; no smoke must be there; we break small dry twigs."

Pierre lays over the faggot pile to start the little smokeless fire. Is he crazy? Just as the fire catches, he falls on it, puts it out, grabs his gun and jumps behind a big tree. I do likewise. A "wuff, wuff," then silence; then "wuff, wuff" very close; as with flashing eyes, looms large the big bull, that misunderstood our crackling of dry limbs for that tea kettle fire. No other bull could sneak through the thicket for his harem. "Wuff, wuff"—again. Two shots. A bull staggered against a little tree and fell and, again an excited "Latin" voiced his joy. And so, next day, after a night under the trees, two happy men staggered campward. One with huge horns; the other with green scalp.

BIRD NOISES.

All Sounds Do Not Come From Their Throats.

Has it ever occurred to you that many of the sounds which birds make do not come from their throat at all, but are produced as mechanically as the noise made by a boy rattling a stick along palings.

One kind of woodpecker produces a sound exactly like the distant roll of a drum, which can be heard half a mile away on a still day.

The "beats" are made at the rate of at least sixteen per second, and how the bird can do it is one of the many mysteries of nature which has still to be solved.

The "beating" of a snipe is another puzzling performance. The snipe has a way of rising high in the air, then dipping sharply, with wings and tail outspread.

The wings quiver from force of air pressure driven through them, and the sound is believed to come from the rapid fluttering of the individual feathers. In any case the sound is produced not vocally but instrumentally.

You have perhaps heard a corn-crake "rasping." It is a most harsh and unpleasant noise, rather like that of a mowing machine. It is more than suspected that this sound, too, is produced otherwise than from the throat of the bird.

In Canada is a sort of a nightjar called by the country folk a "bull-bat." Like all nightjars, it is a night-flying bird, but sometimes comes out in the twilight. The sound this bird makes is a curious booming drone which certainly does not come from the throat, but is probably made by its wings as it swoops after an insect.

Deserts Native Land.

Lt.-Col. Percy A. Guthrie, organizer of the famous "McLean Kilties," has taken out his naturalization papers in the United States, according to word received from Boston, where he intends to reside in the future. He is to become a partner in the law business with James D. Colt, attorney, with offices in that city. These facts were announced when the colonel arrived in Boston from Fredericton, N.B., where he has resided with his wife and children for many years, and where he practiced law for several years prior to the outbreak of war.

Col. Guthrie has many friends in Boston and other sections of New England, gained while he was there recruiting for the "Kilties'" Battalion. He obtained his first naturalization papers there on June 20, which date was his 35th birthday, and his application for admission to legal practice will soon be acted upon.

Col. Guthrie was the first Canadian to offer his services to the crown, and went overseas as a major in the first contingent. Prior to the war he was a colonel in the New Brunswick militia, and a member of the Parliament of that province, having been elected to the latter office when but 27 years of age. He was further distinguished as the "boy alderman" of Fredericton, being then 25 years of age. In the fighting overseas he received 27 wounds from shrapnel.

The Grizzly.

Bears, like pigeons and cats, have an instinct for "homing," it seems. In his book on "The Grizzly" E. A. Mills quotes this story about a pet bear: "He has been teased by a visiting ranchman. When the ranchman had been reassembled and revived, it was decided that the bear must be 'lost.' He was led two hundred miles from the ranch and bidden to go his way. His return to the ranch preceeded that of his keeper by eight hours. Mr. Mills gives the grizzly a good character, saying that he rarely attacks man. When brought to bay, however, he is a courageous fighter. This incident is cited in proof. A grizzly was chased by dogs and hunters into a box canyon. The bear fought the dogs with coolness and resource while the hunters waited for a chance to shoot. When the dogs attacked him from behind or at the side, he brushed them off without turning his eyes from the front. At a favorable moment he charged, scattering the dogs and killing two of them, disabling two horses, breaking a man's arm, and making good his escape before the demoralized party could fire a shot!

Useless Information.

We always devour all the statistics we can find, says an exchange. They are wonderful. Listen:

If all the phonograph records made in one year were thrown from the top of Brock's Monument they would break.

It would take four men some time to lick all the postage stamps made in Ottawa in one year, but we don't know just how long.

If all the telephone conversations from corner drug stores in one year could be recorded on a phonograph, nobody could listen to them.

A mule can climb to the top of Mt. Popocatepetl in five days. He can descend in five seconds.

If all the doughnuts made by the Salvation Army could be linked together in one chain, they would reach from Paris to Somewhere in France.

Mexican Civilization.

There was roughly three settled national civilizations prior to the Conquest, with a minor fourth, the Tarascan, on the middle west coast, Michoacan. The Aztecs were a nation of sacrificers, who had come down from the north some centuries before, and treated the far higher and more peaceful civilizations of Southern Mexico about as did the Goths in Rome, or the Manchu Tartars in China. Their civilization was about on the level with that of contemporary Europe in organization, and much beyond that in education; though they destroyed and never learned the best of what existed before them, writes William Gates in the World's Work. But they were, and still are, a warlike and Tartar race. Oaxaca, the California of Mexico, was the seat of a great civilization, of the Zapotecs and Mixtecs, conquered in battle by the Aztecs but a short time before the Spaniards came. The Mayas of Yucatan are wholly different in race and character; they always have a smile, one never sees a scowl or hears a quarrel; but they are sturdy, laborious, and tenacious of their nationality. The Aztecs were in course of conquering them when the Spaniards came. And the racial antagonism of Mayas for all Mexicans is extreme; they do not want them.—Family Herald.

British Beauty Commits Suicide

ONE of the most famous of British "vamps" made a dramatic exit from the stage a short time ago when Mrs. Arthur Eliot blew off the top of her head with a shotgun. Whether she was disappointed in one of her numerous love affairs or under the influence of a drug is uncertain. Certainly it was not through fear of any impending scandal, for scandal was as the breath of her nostrils; and if it were not uncharitable to say so one would imagine the honorable matrons of England experienced a distinct sensation of relief when they heard the news: no more erring husbands ensnared and devoured; no more homes ruined; no more careers compromised as a result of her blandishments. Mrs. Eliot's place will be taken, no doubt, by able understudies, but it surely will take some time for any of them to rise to her bad eminence. People appeared to have acquired the habit of falling in love with Mrs. Eliot, and she had the habit of destroying them. Nevertheless, she contrived to maintain some sort of position in English society, of the ultra-smart, night-club set, and chose her victims as a rule from the highly placed.

She was best known as Mrs. Mabel Louise Atherton, for she first came into notoriety as the wife of Col. Atherton, of the 12th Lancers. She was the leader of the brilliant band of sensation-seeking women that went to South Africa while the war was on, under the pretext of serving as nurses, but really for the purpose of excitement and intrigue. At Cape Town she established herself and when her husband went to the front her home was soon a centre of gaiety and dissipation. She was very beautiful, a brilliant conversationist, a musician, an author, smart, and daring. Her first victim appears to have been the young Duke of Westminster, who was recently divorced, and at that time was betrothed to a daughter of Mrs. Cornwallis West. So marked were the attentions of the young duke that a scandal arose, and, it is said, was brought to the attention of King Edward. The result was that the duke was summoned home and severely admonished by the King. This had the result of straightening him away, for the time being at least.

It did not discourage Mrs. Atherton, and when men became scarce at the base she followed them as near the front as she was permitted to go. Her imprudences there drew a rebuke from Lord Kitchener, who, as all the world knows, was singularly indifferent to the charms of women. But on one of these foraging expeditions Mrs. Aherton met Capt. John Reginald Yarde-Buller, a young officer of prominence, and the present Baron Churston. This affair was so long continued and so flagrant that Col. Atherton, in 1907, applied for a divorce, which was granted. But worse remained behind. Capt. Yarde-Buller did not display the constancy she was accustomed to and failed to carry out an alleged promise of marriage. Mrs. Atherton sued him for $100,000, and after listening with great gusto to the evidence in the case, a jury decided that undoubtedly some promise had been made and returned a verdict in her favor, but without awarding any of the pecuniary pain-killer.

She next burst into the limelight when John Alexander Stirling, Laird of Kippendale, brought suit against his wife, formerly Clara Taylor, an American actress, naming Lord Northland as co-respondent. Thereupon, Mrs. Stirling filed a counter petition alleging that Mrs. Atherton had engaged the affections of her husband. This double-barrelled trial proved a great delicacy to the scandal loving. Most readers are no doubt aware that details of divorce trials are published in such newspapers as the London Times, and incidents recorded that no Canadian newspaper would think of reporting. So that when there is an interesting divorce case in England the whole world can know about it. Piquancy was added by the role that Mrs. Atherton assumed. She represented herself as a peace-maker. She admitted that Mrs. Stirling appeared to be growing unduly fond of Lord Northland, and that she sought to dissuade her, drawing upon her own unhappy experiences to prove the disaster that was sure to follow. She had then sought to assuage the worry of Mr. Stirling, and had generally acted as the impartial and well-meaning friend of both parties.

Some of the testimony showed that Mrs. Atherton had gone to unconventional lengths, but Mr. Stirling got his decree. Whatever question there was about Mr. Stirling's conduct, there certainly was none about his wife's. She was infatuated and had not sought to conceal it, having declared that if Lord Northland did not marry her she would commit suicide. But Lord Northland did not marry her, and so far as known she did not commit suicide. Mrs. Atherton has not since then figured in a divorce case, but she did not cease to exercise her Circe-like spell. The fact that she was 48 years old at the time of her death, and had by no means exhausted her powers to infatuate, proves her to have been a remarkable woman. In the early days of the present war she was married to Capt. Arthur Eliot, a dramatist, and grandson of the Earl of St. Germans, but apparently she was not planned by nature to be an old-fashioned wife. She lived only for excitement and new sensatios, and her very death by means of a shotgun indicates that her love for the unconventional animated her to the last.

For every 100 workers in factories in Sweden there are 22 women.

Picture Brings $39,000.

The sale of pictures owned by the late Sir George Drummond, of Montreal, at Christy's brought extraordinary prices for works of the Barbizon school, says an exchange. A Corot landscape, painted for Daubigny's studio, realized $34,000. Three works by Corot brought a total of $65,750. These prices were eclipsed by a Daubigny work, which thirty years ago fetched $19,000, and now realized $39,000. It was bought by Airdie Drummond, who will give it to the Montreal Art Gallery. The result of the day's sale was $340,000.

Australians Building Greatest Dam in World To Assist in Irrigation

WHAT is said to be the greatest dam in the world will be located on the Murray river in New South Wales, Australia. The dam, which is for the laudable purpose of irrigating the arid regions of New South Wales and South Australia, will be situated on the Murray river near the border of Southern Australia, and there will be locks and weirs on the Murrimbidge and Darling rivers, also in New South Wales, which will be prodigious schemes in themselves. The site of the dam is on a bed of rock of gray granite. 34 feet below the surface of the land, while similar rock obtrudes in the hills on both sides of the river. Before a decision was reached 28 sites were investigated and 158 borings sunk.

The total length of the dam will be 3,601 feet divided into three sections, an earthen dam of 2,700 feet long, a concrete spillway 740 feet long, and outlet works 161 feet long. The earth work section of the Victorian side of the river extends across the alluvial flats 85 feet above the surface. The level of the dam will be 32 feet in width, on which a roadway will be constructed. The river section will be constructed of solid granite blocks, the largest that can be obtained. It will have 30 piers carrying the roadway, also 30 shutters for the control of the water.

The dam will have a storage capacity of one million acre feet, or 43,560,000,000 cubic feet, or 272,250,000,000 gallons of water. With the reservoir full there will be a submerged area of 30,300 acres.

The generation of electricity is also provided for in the erection of a plant on the New South Wales side of the river. The eight outlet pipes when open will discharge 8,000 cubic feet per second, or 480,000 acre feet per month. Since four of the pipes are capable of discharging 240,000 acre feet per month, the average flow of the river, it will be seen that four others can be closed for repairs wihout reducing the required flow.

This gigantic task is undertaken by the united governments of New South Wales, South Australia and Victoria for redeeming waste and arid lands, where cultivation and development will bring vast wealth to the country. The scheme, which will be assisted by the Federal Government of the Commonwealth, will cost $8,000,000. Thus little by little, man is adding to the conquest of nature, making even the desert places like watered gardens, to blossom as the rose and by their beauty and fertility to serve the human race.

He Didn't Know Numbers.

Clock dials usually represent the hours by use of Roman numerals, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The number four in Roman numerals is commonly represented by IV, but on most clock dials it is four I's, as IIII. There is a reason for this. It traces back to the ignorance of a king of France who ruled 600 years ago.

Tradition among watch and clock makers has it that the clock dial was first made by Henry Vick in the year 1370, and he made it for Charles V, or Charles the Wise, of France. Charles was not as wise as he looked or as his name would suggest. When the dial of the clock was submitted for his approval he studied it long and carefully. Finally he remarked, "The clock is all right with one exception. The figure for four o'clock should be four I's instead of IV."

"Your majesty is wrong," answered Vick. IV is the proper symbol for four."

Charles bristled up with offended dignity and thundered at the timid clockmaker. "I am never wrong. Take this dial away and correct your mistake."

There was nothing else to do. In all his subsequent clock dials Vick was compelled to use the symbol ordered by his sovereign. Other dial-makers followed his example and the authority of stupid Charles V, whose bones have been dust for centuries, still rules the makers of most of our watch and clock dials.

The Pulpit Duck.

Younger son of the famous Archbishop Temple, William Temple, the new Canon of Westminster, has been described as the best elocutionist in the Church of England.

He is a churchman with a great sense of humor and is fond of telling the story of the curate who went to preach in a quiet country village, where a strange parson was unknown. He was met by the verger, who anxiously asked him if he would preach from the chancel.

"Why, my good man?" was the question.

"Well, your reverence," was the reply, "it's like this. I 'ave a duck in the pulpit sitting on fourteen eggs."

The Afghan Conspiracy Aimed at the Conquest Of the Empire of India

THE latest contribution to the clearing up of the Afghan incident, that supplied by Mr. F. H. McLoughlin, an electrical engineer, who was the last European to leave Afghanistan before the famous conquest of India was undertaken by the armies of the usurping Ameer, and the tale he has to tell is one of a typically oriental ambition, furthered in a typically oriental fashion. There are, of course, wheels within wheels; it would not be Afghanistan if it were not so. German propagandists, Russian Bolsheviki, Indian Nationalists, and Afghan religious fanatics, all in turn flit across the stage. Nevertheless, the outline of the story, which begins with a tragedy and ends in something very like a broad farce, is simple enough and conventional enough for the "Arabian Nights."

It begins, of course, with the murder of Habbibullah Khan, last February. Habbibullah was, almost before anything else, the "friend of England," and, during the years of the war, had never wavered in his loyalty to his engagements, in spite of the notorious efforts on the part of Germany to stir up trouble for Great Britain in this highly inflammable region. The news of his murder was followed by a curious silence. Even those quarters usually well supplied with information were without any information, and, for two months, the sum total of the news which leaked out of Kabul into the outside world was that Habbibullah Khan had been murdered; that he had been succeeded by his second son, and that the new Ameer had declared himself disposed to pursue the policy of his father as regarding Great Britain. Then, early in May, came the "bolt from the blue," the attack on the Khyber posts, the "war," in fact, which was to have been a grand descent into India, but which quickly degenerated into the most ordinary guerrilla skirmishing, and, to-day, is ending in a very prosaic and inglorious conference at Rawalpindi.

It is in regard to the two months of silence that Mr. McLoughlin's statement is so illuminating. It now appears to be quite certain that the Government of India was wrong in its first surmise, namely, that the war had been undertaken by the new Ameer simply as a desperate expedient to divert the attention of his subjects from the unsatisfactory state of things at home. Mr. McLoughlin shows quite clearly that it was all part of a deeply laid scheme. The war against India, instigated, in the first instance, by Gereman propagandists, as far back as five years ago, had long been seriously contemplated by a powerful party in the country, of whom the Ameer's brother Nasrulla, and the Ameer's second son, Amunulla, were the most prominent figures. The great obstacle was Habbibullah, and so Habbibullah was assassinated. Immediately thereafter, Amanulla proceeded to achieve a, no doubt, long-cherished design to make himself Ameer. It was easily done. Without exactly saying so, he caused it to be spread abroad that the Ameer's eldest son, Inayatulla, had made no effort to discover the murderers of his father. As a consequence, Inayatulla was branded as a coward, and the throne was offered to Amanulla. Amanulla accepted the offer, and then, to make assurance doubly sure, cast his uncle and his elder brother into prison, and gathering his armies together took them or sent them along the historic road from Kabul to the Khyber Pass. Nothing, Mr. McLouhlin declares, could shake the belief of the commander-in-chief or the Afghan armies that the thing could be done, that India would hail the Afghans as deliverers, and that the rest would be easy. The rest, however, proved to be very difficult. The Punjab and the border tribesmen, once again, proved their loyalty to the British raj, and the Ameer sued for peace. What kind of terms he will get will be decided at Rawalpindi.

The Empire's Enlistment.

The report of the War Cabinet for 1918 summarizes as follows the Empire's war effort. The strength of the regular army reserve and territorial forces on the fourth of August, 1914, was 733,514. England has since recruited 4,006,158 men. With other enlistments in the whole Empire were 7,130,280. The figures of enlistment for races other than white including over 1,250,000 from India were 1,524,187, giving a grand total for all the races of the Empire of 8,654,467.

In addition to these Chinese and other labor units were raised for service in Saloniki, Egypt and Mesopotamia.

The following were the total casualties of he Empire to the end of 1918: Killed, officers, 38,264; other ranks, 628,569; wounded, officers, 92,142; other ranks, 1,948,378; missing, officers, 11,958; other ranks, 342,610.

"Britannia the Pride of the Ocean."

The two songs, "Britannia the Pride of the Ocean" and "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean," appear to have been written by the same person, an Englishman, named David T. Shaw. The New York Independent recently had an editorial based on the erroneous supposition that the first named song is entitled "Britannia the Gem of the Ocean," in which it said: "But originality is not characteristic of national songs. 'Britannia the Gem of the Ocean' had a certain appropriateness. To an observer in a dirigible the island might well look like an emerald 'set in the silver sea.' But 'Columbia the Gem of the Ocean' is absurd. A gem of the size of the United States would be classed as a semi-precious stone at least." It has been moved and seconded that a transposition be made, "gem" being placed in the Britannia song and "pride" in the Columbia song, so as to make a more appropriate setting for each. Are you ready for the question?

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. THEY HEARD DRAKE'S DRUM.

Devonshire Sailors Believe They Heard Admiral's Summons.

"If the Dons sight Devon, I'll quit the port of heaven, an' drum them up the Channel as we drummed them long ago."

Every Englishman knows the prophecy of Drake's drum as Sir Henry Newbolt sets it forth in his West Country song, and this is the tale, told by Mr. Arthur Machen in the Outlook, of how Devon men heard the great admiral's drum on November 21, 1918, the day of the surrender of the German fleet.

"One of the ships was the Royal Oak, chiefly manned by sailors of Devonshire. She was flying on that day a magnificent silk ensign made for her by Devonshire ladies. On her bridge, 60 feet above the top deck, was a group of officers: Admiral Grant, Capt. Maclachlan of the Royal Oak, the commander, and others. It was soon after nine o'clock in the morning when the German fleet appeared, looming through the mist. Admiral Grant saw them, and waited; he could scarcely believe, he says, that they would not instantly open fire.

"Then the drum began to beat on the Royal Oak. The sound was unmistakable; it was that of a small drum, being beaten 'in rolls.' At first the officers on the bridge paid little attention, if any, to the sound, so intent were they on the approaching enemy. But when it became evident that the Germans were not to show fight, Admiral Grant turned to the captain of the Royal Oak, and remarked on the beating of the drum. The captain said that he heard it, but could not understand it, since the ship was cleared for action, and every man on board was at his battle-station. The commander also heard it, but could not understand, and sent messengers all over the ship to investigate. Twice the messengers went about the ship—about all the decks. They reported that every man was at his post. Yet the drums continued to beat. Then the commander himself made a special tour of investigation through the Royal Oak. He, too, found that every man was at his station.

"All the while the British fleet was closing round the German fleet, coming to anchor in a square about it, so that the German ships were hemmed in. And all the while that this was being done, the noise of the drum was heard at intervals, beating in rolls. But those who heard it were convinced that it was no sound of flapping sails or any such accident. The ear of the naval officers is attuned to all the noises of his ship, in fair weather and in foul; it makes no mistakes. All who heard knew that they heard the rolling of a drum.

"At about two o'clock in the afternoon the German fleet was enclosed and helpless, and the British ships dropped anchor, some fifteen miles off the Firth of Forth. The utter, irrevocable ruin and disgrace of the German navy was consummated. And at that moment the drum stopped beating and was no more heard.

"But those who had heard it, admiral, captain, commander, other officers and men of all ratings, held then and now one belief as to that rolling music. They believe that the drum heard was 'Drake's Drum'; the audible manifestation of the spirit of the great sea captain, present at this hour of the tremendous triumph of Britain on the seas. This is the firm belief of them all."

CORAL NOW CRAZE

Quaint Ornaments Include Necklaces and Beads.

Red Is Preferred to All Other Shades; Jade and Amber Well Up in the Lead.

In all the large shops nowadays there is a certain counter which is so crowded that it is difficult to get near it. This is the one where the necklaces and beads, the gorgeous pendants and strings of quaint ornaments are displayed.

This is the day of the necklace, beyond a doubt the rebound from the quiet days of the war, notes a fashion writer, when we hid our jewels and little trifles so precious to the feminine heart. Joy has brought about a perfect riot of colorful things to be hung about our necks and tell by their brilliant glow and striking tones the victory note within our hearts. Red seems to be preferred to all other shades, though one finds jade and amber close up in the lead, too.

Coral is the thing this summer—it is even being made up into a sort of fringe with which to edge hems of skirts, the little teethlike coral bits being threaded along in a vivid line. Not until one has considered this vogue for coral do we realize how many different colors there are, for when one speaks of coral there comes at once into the mind's eye that deep red which for so many years seemed to be the only shade known. Nowadays, however, we have learned of the exquisite pale shades as delicate as a wild rose, the coral bits being polished into perfect round beads and threaded into exquisite strings of any desired length. Tiny gold clasps are used to fasten the short necklaces, while the longer strings are mounted in unending circles.

By the same turn of the wheel which seems to bring back into favor so many things discarded years ago coral earrings are in favor. I am sure many of us have inherited those long pendant earrings with a hoop of gold, supporting a small coral rose richly carved. From this depended strands of gold fringe.

In the summer time there are so many little things brought out to give an added touch of gayety to our appearance that one can go on forever talking about the new little things which one sees in favor for a moment. As to the matter of shoes, for instance, what woman can resist a pair of swaggering Spanish-looking brown suede pumps with colonial tongue and cut steel buckles?

One of the curious color combinations which as yet has not been overdone is brown and pink—for illustration one often sees a rose pink georgette gown tied with a generous sash of brown satin ribbon or tulle or, the other way around, a brown frock is just as apt to be encircled with a pink sash. It is for just such a combination of unusual colors that the lovely brown suede pumps are surely intended, though there is the satisfaction about brown that it can be worn with almost anything.

White buckskin and brown kid are combined in some very smart low shoes for country wear, and brown stockings of a very fine soft quality of wool are flecked all over with white and designed to be worn with these same good shoes.

Crockery Designs.

The earliest crockery designs made use of in England were obtained from the Chinese.

AFTERNOON FROCK OF SATIN

This frock of brown satin, simply made into an afternoon outfit, acquires charm by rows of cords. It is suggested as a practical, all-round costume.

GLITTER AND GLISTEN FADS

Bead Embroideries and Paillettes, Tunics of Gorgeous Brocades, and Fringes and Tassels.

This is a season of glitter and glisten so far as evening frocks are concerned. Bead embroideries and paillettes, tunics made of gorgeous brocades, which show silver and gold designs on shot backgrounds of gauze or crepe, fringes everywhere, and, of course, tassels. It is an ultrasumptuous year, but not unduly extravagant, because brocaded tunics can be easily made at home, and then need not run into more than two yards of material at most. If you happen to see a remnant of rich broche silk—metallic designs on a dark or black ground—possess yourself of it. If it is not long enough to make the whole of an evening tunic it will certainly make a splendid border, with bands for the corsage and armholes, of one made of chiffon or voile de soie. In putting on a hem of metallic brocade one ought to introduce a little hand embroidery—feather stitching or something of that sort. This gives the garment the desirable air of being "a creation."

FLOOR CUSHION THE LATEST

Contrivance Is Covered With Woven Rugs—May be Used for Porch or Lawn.

No cheap rug goes so well with mahogany furniture as does a rag rug, especially in a bedroom. Indeed some clever young women, setting out in housekeeping in attractive houses, with white enameled woodwork and good mahogany furniture, old and new, have decided to start out with rag rugs in their living rooms, to replace them later on probably by more pretentious rugs. But the rag rugs are especially good in an interior in which original or reproduced colonial mahogany is used. But the latest thing is not the rag rug, attractive as that is in its springtime guise. The latest thing is the floor cushion, covered with woven rugs. This fabric, with which the cushions are covered, is identical with that of the rug. It is simply formed into a cover for a big cushion and then is used as a floor cushion or for the porch or lawn. Usually there is a plain center section, with a band of floral design at each end.

DRESSES OF YELLOW VELVET

Rich Garment Carries a Most Pleasing Contrast in Its Facings of Orchid Velvet.

A dress of yellow velvet carries an exquisite contrast in its facings of orchid velvet. The neck is cut deeply square in front and is invisibly wired to stand up in the back, where the orchid tones display themselves against the skin of the throat and neck. The bodice of this dress is cut kimono sleeve and is tight at the waistline like a basque. The elbow-length sleeves are faced with orchid velvet.

The flowers at the girdle line are made of taffeta in shades of mauve, orange, pale yellow and purple. These flowers are a lovely part of the costume because every color seems to answer either to the orchid or the yellow velvet of the gown. The skirt of this picturesque model is draped slightly bias, so as to swing tightly around the feet. There a facing of orchid velvet contrasts with the yellow folds of the skirt.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

Paris is shortening her skirts.

Looped silk in silk or wool is popular.

Separate skirts are assuming an important position in woman's wardrobe.

There is a revival of the lace parasol of grandmother's days. One striking one has black lace mounted over green taffeta.

Headdresses of all sorts are popular and are worn low on the head, covering the entire brow and quite often the eyebrows.

A Coated Tongue? What it Means

A bad breath, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, languor and debility, are usually signs that the liver is out of order. Prof. Hemmeter says: "The liver is an organ secondary in importance only to the heart."

We can manufacture poisons within our own bodies which are as deadly as a snake's venom.

The liver acts as a guard over our well-being, sifting out the cinders and ashes from the general circulation.

A blockade in the intestines piles a heavy burden upon the liver. If the intestines are choked or clogged up, the circulation of the blood becomes poisoned and the system becomes loaded with toxic waste, and we suffer from headache, yellow-coated tongue, bad taste in mouth, nausea, or gas, acid dyspepsia, languor, debility, yellow skin or eyes. At such times one should take castor oil or a pleasant laxative. Such a one is made of May-apple, leaves of aloe and jalap, put into ready-to-use form by Doctor Pierce, nearly fifty years ago, and sold for 25 cents by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THE MOSAIC DISEASE

HOW THE TOBACCO CROPS ARE AFFECTED.

Plants That Are "Sick" Can Be Recognized by Their Mottled Appearance—The Crop Yield Is Reduced and the Quality of the Leaf Destroyed, But Disease Is Not Transmissible Through Seed.

The mosaic disease of tobacco, more commonly known as "calico," "mottle top," and various other local names by the growers, occurs in almost all countries where tobacco is grown. The diseased plants can be detected by their peculiar mosaiced or mottled appearance, the leaves being well covered with irregularly shaped, light and dark green spots. The leaves are sometimes distorted and the surface uneven and puckered, due to more rapid growth of the dark green areas. Diseased plants have a tendency to ripen prematurely, the leaves often disintegrating and going to pieces before harvest time. Mosaiced plants are also very susceptible to attack by the so-called "rusts" of tobacco. When plants become diseased in early stages of growth, the yield is decidedly reduced; besides, the texture and elasticity of the leaf is practically destroyed.

Since no specific organism has been definitely proven as the cause of the trouble, the mosaic of tobacco is still classed as a physiological disease. The disease, however, is transmissible from diseased to healthy plants by means of the sap that contains the virus or infectious principle of the disease. In this way it is widely distributed in the field from diseased to healthy plants by the operations of topping and suckering. This is evident from the greatly increased number of diseased plants at harvest time. Observations and counts that have been made in the field for the past few years shortly before both topping and harvest, show that the number of diseased plants at cutting time are about ten times as great as just previous to topping.

All diseased plants, as soon as noticed, should be pulled up and removed from the field. The persons pulling the plants should thoroughly wash their hands with soap and water before working with healthy plants. Experiments conducted for the past three years along this line, have materially reduced the number of diseased plants at harvest on such plots as compared with the same on plots where plants were not removed.

Avoid the use of decoctions made from refuse tobacco, also old tobacco stalks and stems for watering the seedlings in the beds, as such may contain the virus of the mosaic disease.

Do not transplant mosaiced seedlings from the bed to the field. It is rather difficult to detect the diseased seedlings in the bed at such an early stage of growth, but careful scrutiny by the persons pulling the plants will reduce the number of mosaiced seedlings transplanted. Disease inspections in the field point strongly to much of the trouble being due to the transplanting of mosaiced seedlings. If mosaiced seedlings are pulled from the beds, healthy seedlings are also infected at the same time, thus producing a rather high percentage of diseased plants in the field.

Apparently the soil and climatic conditions have some effect on the prevalence of the disease as observations in the field for the past three years have shown a decided difference in the amount of disease present. The disease, with a few exceptions, was much more prevalent in 1917 than in the past season of 1918.

According to all evidence at hand, the disease is not transmissible through the seed; still, mosaiced plants should not be retained for seed production.

A Color Sensation.

What is known as the Talbot green is the color sensation of Paris, according to an American buyer of millinery. At any rate it is chiefly by the brilliancy of their coloring that Paris designers are expressing their joy of victory.

Blouses Are Knitted.

The new French knitted blouse is a sort of glorified sweater, made of wool, mercerized cotton or silk. The blouses are distinctive for their long skirt sections, some extending to within eight or ten inches of the skirt hem.

CANADA'S PESTS.

Mrs. Mosquito Does All the Biting of Human Victims.

Whatever else may be said of the mosquito, there is one thing certain: he is a perfect gentleman. The male mosquito never bites. But, unfortunately, the same cannot be said of the female of the species, for it is the lady mosquito which helps to make life unbearable for us during the warm weather.

The female mosquito has the ability and desire to piece the human skin with her needle-like mouth, if she gets the chance, and to suck a small drop of blood. If this were all she did it would be bad enough; but, when Mrs. Mosquito pierces the skin she also injects an irritating substance, saliva, which sometimes carries with it microscopic, unicellular animals, which cause malaria. Indeed, down the microscopic salivary duct of the mosquito has flowed the fluid, which has altered the fate of continents and played a conspicuous part in the destruction of the ancient civilizations of Greece and Rome, according to no lesser authority than Shipley.

Mosquito larvae live only in water, but the females of certain species display what might almost be called foresight; they lay their eggs on ground, which will later become covered with water, as on the mud of low places, along a salt marsh. The most familiar mosquito eggs are those of the rain-barrel species—eggs which are laid on end, side by side, in a boat shaped mass on the surface of the water in barrels, tubs and similar places.

The larva or "wriggler," which hatches from an egg has a very short breathing siphon on its back, at the tail end. The larva is lighter than water; when feeding or at rest it floats just below the surface and parallel to it; when disturbed it wriggles vigorously from side to side, the motion sometimes carrying it downward, but more frequently sideways. When at the surface the end of the breathing siphon pierces the "surface film," opens it, and exposes the ends of the tracheae, the tubes which convey air to all parts of the creature's body. In order to feed on the microscopic plants and other organic material floating at the surface, the larva twists its neck until its mouth is on a line with its back.

As a young insect feeds its flesh increases, but it's skin does not stretch sufficiently to accommodate the enlarging body. Therefore, the old skin is cast from time to time and a new, larger skin is formed. Finally there comes a time, as in the case of such insects as moths and beetles, which like the mosquito have a complete metamorphosis or change, when there emerges from a larval skin something which is neither larva nor adult, and which is called the pupa.

The pupa of moths is, for the most part, immobile and frequently enclosed in a protective case, the cocoons, which is spun for it by the larva. The pupa of the mosquito, on the other hand, is active, but not so active as a larva, and it does not feed. It also differs from the larva in being hunched up, instead of slender and in having a pair of breathing siphons on its thorax, (the part of the body just back of the head), instead of a single siphon on the tail. The adult mosquito finally emerges from a split in the back of the cast pupal skin, which forms a miniature boat, upon which the adult may stand while stretching itself before it flies away to perpetuate its species, perhaps at the expense of ours. Studies on a common fresh-water mosquito, recently made, showed that at 20 degrees C., the cycle was completed in 19.6 days, at 25 degrees, in 11.7 days, and at 30 degrees in 7.8 days.

Where Pigeons Flock.

The pigeons of London are one of the sights to which the attention of visitors is always drawn, says the Christian Science Monitor. St. Paul's churchyard is a great place of gathering, and here the birds flock down for the more lavish midday meal spread out for their benefit, now that rations are less vigorously controlled. They feed out of the hands of their benefactors, perch on their shoulders, and flap and glitter in the sunshine as they fly up and down. Pigeons seem to belong to certain places. Admiralty Arch is another favorite resort, but all over the city the birds have small colonies, and crowds of faithful friends. In Venice and in Florence the pigeons are as much a part of the picture as the greatest buildings, a finishing touch, as it were, with which nobody can dispense.

Famous Old Hospital.

Bedlam is a famous old hospital for the treatment of the insane, now situated in the Lambeth road, London. It has been used ever since the year 1547, when the Monastery of St. Mary of Bethlehem was granted to the citizens of London for the purpose. Bedlam is a popular corruption of "Bethlehem," and the word is used for any madhouse or scene of uproar.

Labor Summoned Peers.

I was present at the meeting of the British Coal Commission, writes Walter Weyl in the New Republic, when Mr. Smillie demanded the appearance of various noblemen who receive their income from mine royalties. "I ask you," he said to the chairman, "to subpoena the Duke of Northumberland, the Earl of Durham, the Marquis of Bute, Lord Tredegar." As he pronounced each name and title the chairman repeated them, and in this contrast of voices and intonations I seemed to discover one of the roots of the elusive class conflict in England. It was as though men of two nations spoke; the rough proletarian accent of Smillie contrasted harshly with the easy, cultured utterance of Justice Sankey, the neat clearness of his syllables, his quiet cadences. It almost seemed as though the justice was mocking Mr. Smillie. But he was not mocking; it was merely the university conversing with the board school. Behind his charming smile the justice, as he toyed with a pencil, was swiftly deciding ot bring the peers here before the miners with papers, documents and, if necessary, title deeds.

Now the mere summoning of these peers was almost a revolutionary event, for it is unusual for coal diggers to subpoena lords. It is a sign of a social overturn. True, it is in the King's name that they are summoned, but King George V, by the grace of God, had little enough to do with it. So the peers came and testified and went, came and went in sober twentieth century morning clothes, and all that spectacular part of the business is over.

"Here They Come!"

It is the cry of the children when a band is heard far down the street. Nearer and nearer it draws until each note becomes clearer and clearer.

To those in the city this is a familiar picture. But to those residing in suburban towns stirring strains of band music are more rare.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

in your home makes it possible for you and your children to have at all times the wonderful march music that has inspired the world.

Wherever you live—on the farm or in town—let the New Edison bring the parade, with all its glamour, into your living room, every instrument, every note as clear as a real band—thanks to the genius of Thomas A. Edison.

We tell a wonderful story about the New Edison in a beautiful book that you should have. It is called "Edison and Music". Ask for it; and also for "What the Critics Say".

A nasty accident occurred on Saturday last at Conway when George Davern was seriously injured as a result of his horse running away. The horse was standing, and became frightened at something, bolted and threw Mr. Davern from the rig, and fractured his hip. He was taken to the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, where he is doing very well.

RUN OVER BY TRAIN

GEORGE FOLGER INSTANTLY KILLED ON G. T. R. TRACKS

Early Saturday morning Geo. Folger a G. T. R. sectionman, and a returned soldier, was run over and instantly killed on the G.T.R. tracks at the Belleville road crossing. A coronor's jury was empannelled and from the evidence given it would appear that Folger was killed by the Royal train taking the Prince of Wales to Kingston, or the pilot engine preceeding the train. Deceased was placed on guard at the Belleville crossing, and after the Royal train had passed the section foreman, Albert Bowen, called the men in and all but Folger appeared. With the rest of the sectionmen he searched around until they found the body about two hundred feet east of the Belleville crossing, badly mangled, and lying between the rails of the east bound track. Folger went on duty about 11 p.m., railway time, and was in a normal condition. Folger's watch had stopped at 1 a.m.. Folger's instructions were to keep off the track and guard switch and crossing. The coronor's jury met on Tuesday evening and after hearing the evidence adjourned until Thursday evening for further evidence. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales called up Chief Barrett on Sunday afternoon to learn the particulars of the accident, and his private secretary has sent a letter of condolence to the family. Deceased was the son of Mr. Owen Folger, and about twenty-four years of age. The funeral took place on Sunday from his father's residence to Riverside cemetery.

Canadian Bank Clearings.

That Canada is well able to support the Victory Loan is clearly shown by the Canadian bank clearings for the current year. They indicate that the year's total will exceed $15,000,000,000 compared with $13,776,000,000 in 1918. And the year's total clearings should be three times those of 1909.

Must Subscribe More

Dividing the people of Canada into three classes — the comparatively poor, the moderately wealthy, and the very wealthy — it would seem that if contributions to the Victory Loans constitute service to the nation, the moderately wealthy class is hardly doing its share. Of the money subscribed to the Victory Loan 1918, two hundred and seventy-one million dollars were in bonds of $5,000 and under, ninety-four millions in bonds of between $5,000 and $25,000, and three hundred and one millions in bonds of $25,000 and over.

HALLOWE'EN

Oh, Hallowe'en is a spooky night,
The owls, cats and bats have a great fight,
The ghosts, goblins, witches, and elves—
All try their witch-craft, not on themselves,
But on Poor Little Me.

My pumpkin-faced lantern lights my way,
As on the spooky streets I play,
The street is aglow from the fire-light bright,
That boils the witches' enchanted caldron on Hollowe'en night—
Around which the goblins dance for glee.

Farther on there's a bonfire out in the street,
Here the children bake apples nice and sweet,
Popcorn, taffy and good things with lemonade,
Stand on a table already made,
And elves play on the lea.

After ghost stories have been told
And the "Pirate's Treasures" have been unfold,
The bonfire burns low.
And the little children to bed must go,
To dream of the Hallowe'ens to be.

Composed by Madeline May Stevens, aged 11 years.

JOHN GARRISON

There passed away on Aug. 30 at his home in Morven, a very respected citizen in the person of John Garrison in his 81st year.

Deceased had been ailing for over a year with heart trouble but was confined to his bed for only a couple of days prior to his death The late Mr. Garrison was a man of sterling worth, of a cheerful disposition, and a neighbor who was always ready and willing to assist another in time of need. He was a life long member of the Methodist Church and had occupied the various offices pertaining thereto. When health permitted you were sure to see Mr. and Mrs. Garrison in regular attendance at Sabbath School and church, and their place will be very hard to fill.

He leaves to mourn his widow, Martha Lampkins, and family, Charles, of Napanee, Norman, of Hawley, Mrs. Wilson Purdy, on the homestead, Gideon and Damon of Napanee. Two sons, Melbourne and Stewart, predeceased their father several years ago. The funeral service was conducted at the house by his pastor, Rev. R. G. Carruthers, and the large number present was but a slight evidence of the esteem in which Mr. Garrison was held. The family have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood.
